

Andrew Valdez

Andrew Valdez serves as the Sabino Canyon Recreation Area Transportation Scholar for the 2012-2013 Public Lands Transportation Scholar program. He will be working in Sabino Canyon, Arizona in the Coronado National Forest. Andrew will be providing guidance for the development of an active transportation network to enhance visitor experience and preserve environmental resources. He graduated with a Bachelor of Science from Fort Lewis College in Durango, Colorado and with a Master of Urban and Regional Planning from the University of Colorado, Denver. Andrew's work and research is focused on understanding the causal relationships between public health, resource usage, infrastructure design and the built environment.