

Corinne Jachelski

Corinne Jachelski is serving as the Public Lands Transportation Fellow at Rocky Mountain Arsenal Wildlife Refuge for 2018-2019. During her assignment, Corinne looks forward to managing several trail projects and working with community groups to create greater access to recreation opportunities and improve visitor experience.

Corinne graduated from Clark University with a Bachelors in Geography and a Master's in Environmental Science and Policy with a focus on sustainable urbanism. She is deeply interested in the intersections between sustainability, health, and social justice in the built (and natural) environment. A lover of all things transportation, she enjoys exploring cities and landscapes by bike and foot.
