

Tommy Egland

Tommy began working as a Transportation Fellow with the Savannah Coastal Refuge Complex in Savannah, Georgia in September 2020. He is a graduate of Colorado State University (CSU) where he earned a Master's in Conservation Leadership where he studied collaboration, community engagement, and strategic planning. Prior to serving as a PLTF, Tommy spent several seasons working with the National Park Service and Forest Service across Oregon, Montana, and Colorado with the Northwest Youth Corps, Glacier Institute, and the Rocky Mountain Conservancy. With these organizations, Tommy was a dedicated teacher and trail crew manager, leader, and member.

Tommy is excited for the opportunities that will be presented while working with the Savannah Coastal Refuge Complex, the greater US Fish and Wildlife Service, and a chance to explore a new part of the Country. While with the Complex, Tommy will focus on improving access to the Refuges through exploring opportunities to evaluate and coordinate infrastructure and corridor improvements and help aid in improving refuge planning. Tommy originally hales from the Pacific Northwest but has made the Rocky Mountains home and loves to spend as much time as possible exploring our public lands.
